December 2010

The Leeward Housing Coalition and Planning Members

In the past several years, the need to coordinate and collaborate among housing and homelessness providers became crucial. This forced the providers to commit to meeting regularly for open discussion on internal strengths and weakness and on policies impacting successful approaches to housing.

Executive Summary

In 2006 the Governor held a town meeting on the Wai`anae Coast to discuss the issue of homelessness. Residents expressed frustration with an issue at crisis levels resulting in homeless encampments stretching along the entire coast. The community expressed outrage that the Wai`anae Coast was becoming the default "capitol" for the homeless and wanted other communities to do their fair share in addressing this issue.

Shortly after the Governor's town meeting, an emergency proclamation was issued to address the health conditions of those living on the beaches by providing exemptions from current building permits to "fast-track" development of homeless shelters and provide emergency funding to increase the number of units to house the homeless.

As shelters were opened by various provider agencies, monthly meetings were organized to share information, address inter-agency issues, and identify long term issues relating to homelessness and human services. This group became the Leeward Housing Coalition (LHC).

In 2009 the LHC convened a one-day community summit resulting in the following recommendations: (1) improve coordination of services addressing homelessness including access to help, entry and transition into and between shelters, (2) develop an action plan to address gap areas for long-term and permanent housing, and (3) identify outcome measurements for shelters on the coast.

To implement these recommendations, the LHC worked to secure a legislative resolution (SCR 206 S.D. 1 and HCR 262 H.D. 1) to develop a plan to address the immediate, short and long term needs of the homeless and identifying the LHC as the lead agency. The resolution requested the following:

1. Identify community, agency, and funding resources serving the homeless and the at-risk population
2. Develop a continuum of care for Wai`anae Coast individuals and families who are homeless or at-risk of becoming homeless
3. Develop a case management system based on client outcomes that connects outreach, emergency shelters, transitional housing, and support programs
4. Provide recommendations for single point of access system, and
5. Identify existing shelters and recommend changes in the physical and appropriations infrastructure

This report includes recommendations addressing each of these areas and was developed by the LHC and members of the community. A more detailed listing of participating organizations is included in this report.

Summary of Recommendations

Assets Mapping and Communication

- Create a "centralized" information gathering/dissemination capability.
- Maintain current resource links that includes formal agreements between providers to collecting data and information.
- Provide information and updates to the Neighborhood Boards on services available and readily accessible to the community residents.
- Provide necessary annual funding and/or other resources for on-going support to the Leeward Coast partnership of providers.
- Establish a process of communication with the resource directory to include criteria for funding or grant award assuring applicants' meet the community protocol eligibility.
- Provide the community with information on further developments or service expansion prior to the initiating of permits or project implementation

CONTINUUM OF CARE

- It is recommended that future contracts for homeless outreach services should be location specific (assigned to regions) with the providers selected aware of and linked to services in the community.
- It is recommended that future contracts for homeless outreach services should be linked to emergency and transitional shelters within the regions they are serving. Systems should be in place for those individuals and families that would benefit in relocating into another area of the island.
- No new, additional emergency or transitional shelters should be developed within the community.
- There should be a reduction in the number of "beds" required for un-sheltered individuals in the West O`ahu region and accommodations developed in other areas on O`ahu where the need has increased.
- Consolidate the two emergency shelters in West O`ahu into one emergency shelter located in the Kalaeloa area to serve the region.
- There should be no "safe haven" locations identified and developed within the community.
- At least one emergency shelter should provide kennels for families and individuals with pets.
- Secure state and federal dollars to support "Housing First" model programs beyond the development stage.

- Transitional shelters should provide a two- or three-tiered system of service to those they accommodate and reasonable time frames for expecting families or individuals to be able to move from transitional housing.
- The community needs to establish a Community Housing Development (CHDO) Organization to identify and address its own long term housing needs.

CASE MANAGEMENT

- Establish a "Best-Practice" and definition of case management system for the community.
- Establish a "code of conduct" among the providers in the community who provide services to the residents of the community
- Create a "standard case management structure", offering on-going training on the components of the case management structure.
- Create a "level of outcomes" that will be expected between levels of shelters and the services provided.
- Create a set aside line item in all budgets for professional development and training, instituting this requirement in all contracts
- Provide necessary annual funding through a "Community Development Block Grant" specifically for the Leeward Housing Coalition – Case Management Services for on-going training and development of components to the structure.
- Provide case management support in public housing to guide residents to non-subsidized independent housing and to determine those who could and should stay in public housing for the long-term, i.e. the elderly or disabled.

Infrastructure and Capital Improvement

- No new, additional shelters should be developed within the community.
- There should be a reduction in the number of "beds" required for un-sheltered individuals within the community and other accommodations developed in other areas on O`ahu where the need has increased.
- There should be no "safe haven" locations identified and developed within the community.
- Crucial core services to the community, which was reduced/eliminated, need to be re-instated and expanded to provide the services needed to prepare families and individuals with mental health or substance abuse issues to accept the pathway for responsible life-styles.
- Providing "apartment" accommodations for Kupuna while allowing their "rights" to be transferred to their descendants to allow a larger homestead to go to the Kupuna's family should be considered.

- DHHL should also look at providing more alternatives to single-family housing, i.e. SROs, apartments, condos, etc.
- A “new” type of shelter needs to be explored for youth that may challenge to become emancipated or who age out of foster care but are not ready to be totally independent.
- Transitional shelters should provide a two- or three-tiered system of service to those they accommodate and reasonable time frames for expecting families or individuals to be able to move from transitional housing.
- A specific percentage of housing must be identified and made available within specific ranges of “affordability” (i.e. very low income, low income, and moderate income).
- Single Room Occupancy (SRO) should be explored and made available. Boarding houses should be explored as an acceptable SRO housing alternative.
- Mobile home parks should be explored and allowed given proper code restrictions.
- At least one emergency shelter should provide kennels for the families and individuals with pets.
- Qualifications to enter and remain in public housing should be continually reviewed and residents should be working towards leaving public housing rather than public housing being the final “home”. Movement into private sector housing needs to be encouraged and individuals and families should have help from the Public Housing Authority to establish these goals within reasonable time limits. The exception to this process could be the elderly or disabled.

Background

The increase in homelessness in Hawai'i has reached an epidemic level. In the two years between 2005 and 2007 alone, the homeless population on O'ahu rose nearly 30%, reaching almost 8,000. During the period, the Leeward Coast "(overtook) Downtown Honolulu as the area with the greatest number of homeless" with 37% of the island's homeless population residing on the beaches and in beach parks and area shelters (Will Hoover, "Homeless Population on O'ahu Rises 28.2%" Honolulu Advertiser.com 17 June 2007). Furthermore, 20% of the Leeward Coast's homeless are estimated to be children ages birth to five. The number of homeless in Hawai'i will continue to rise with the downward spiral of the economy, and homelessness will "hit an all time high". ("Isle Homeless Count Expected to Soar" Star Bulletin 11 March 2009, A1).

The 2009 Homeless Service Utilization Report, produced by the HPHA reveals disturbing trends in Hawai'i shelters. (Note: these numbers reflect O'ahu shelters only and do not include the families living on beaches and in beach parks.)

- Hawai'i Shelters housed 978 (up from 694 in 2008) children ages birth to five;
- Hawaiian/Native Hawaiians had the largest population (over 30%) of all ethnic groups;
- 71% (up from 68% in 2008) of the shelter adults were unemployed, with 11% working part-time;
- 29% of the adults had not completed high school, GED or High School Certificate.

In early 2006 the Governor of Hawai'i held a town meeting to address the health, safety and sanitation of the homeless population on the coast. Many showed up for this meeting, Representatives from the business community, service providers, private residents, homeowners' associations and the homeless provided countless points of views and offered possible solutions.

The general sense from the community was a fear that "we" would once again become the "capitol" for the homeless. We have our own to deal with, cannot handle anymore and wanted other communities to do their fair share in addressing this issue. The attention that was being drawn to our community was relevant when the Mayor of Honolulu stated the city was not in the housing business and parks were not designed for long-term living or sheltering. This came at the time of park closures for Ala Moana Beach, Kapiolani Park and other parks in the Waikiki-Honolulu areas.

Additional concerns were the increase in crime, drug use, illegal activities that included trash dumping on the public parks and youth supervision. There were also concerns on the behaviors and attitudes of the homeless themselves. More and more these individuals stated they "had the right to be there, because of they were Native Hawaiians", "it is their cultural or birth right". Others felt that homelessness was not a choice but a circumstance for lack of resource, i.e. affordable housing – rentals, jobs, education, and family condition.

It was and is recognized that not all the homeless on the Leeward Coast are from the Leeward Coast. To determine who are using the resources for the homeless today within the Leeward Coast a quick and short survey was conducted at the emergency and transitional shelters. This survey was performed from November 10, 2010 through November 30, 2010. Of the eight shelter providers within the subject area, six returned the surveys of their clients. The questions asked were:

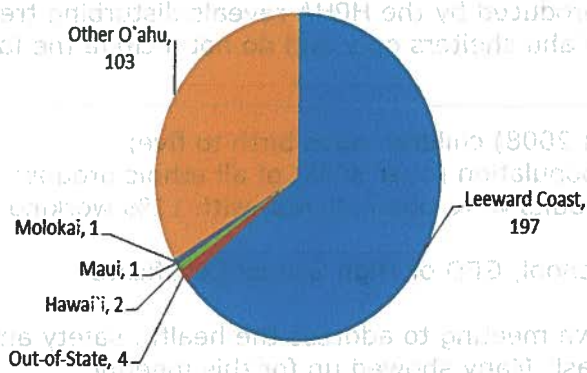

1. Where were you living prior to becoming homeless or unsheltered?
2. Where were you medical services?
3. What school did your children go to?

4. Now that you are here, where do you want to go for housing?

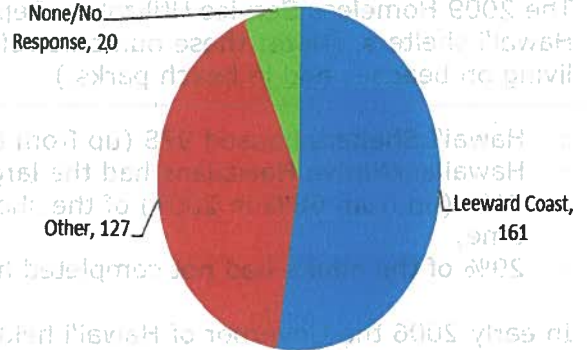

5. Which outreach provider/agency referred the household or individual to the facility?

Currently of 308 individuals surveyed it was determined that 197 (64%) self-identified as coming from the Leeward Coast (Ewa Beach to Kaena). This means that 36% of the residents in those shelters providing information were from other areas including; other areas on O`ahu, Chuuk, Moloka`i, Maui, Hawai`i Island and out-of-state. There was even a case of a referral from a nursing home to a shelter.

Where were you living prior to becoming unsheltered?

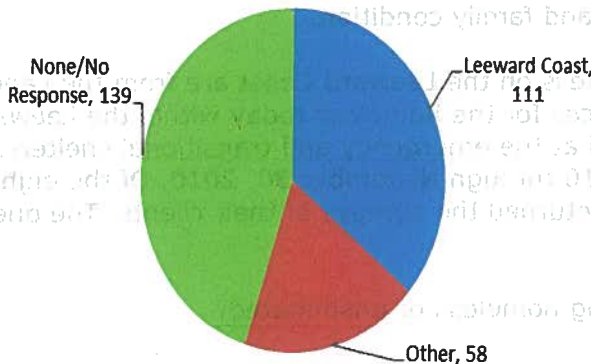

Where were your medical services?

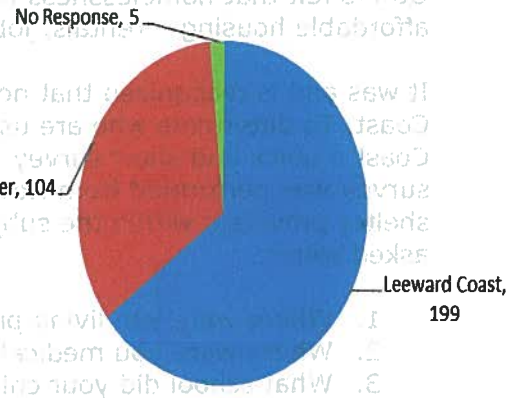

While medical services do not necessarily indicate where someone became unsheltered it can be used as an indicator of where households or families may have been receiving services prior to becoming unsheltered or homeless. This may also indicate a "comfort" area for some.

The question of education for children also can be used as an indicator of where households and individuals may have originated from since school enrollment is usually tied to a geographic area. In this survey, it appears that most of the families with children had them enrolled in schools in the Leeward Coast area.

What school did your children go to?

Where do you want to go for housing?

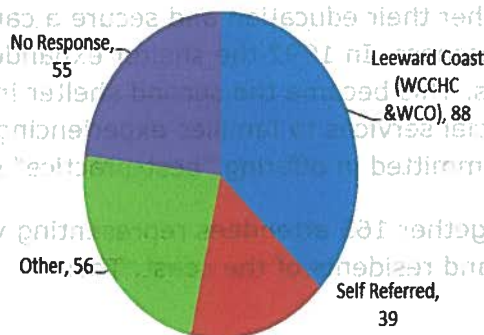

History of Homelessness on the Leeward Coast

Surprisingly, 104 (33.8%) of the respondents reported that they wanted to move into housing outside of the Leeward Coast area. (Those who had no preference were included in the numbers willing to stay on the Leeward Coast.) This number is fairly close to the number of households and/or individuals who actually stated that they came from somewhere outside of the Leeward Coast. This could be an indication that there are not enough services and opportunities for clients to find resources within their own communities and that they must leave their community to find the services to help them in the process towards housing independence. This may also indicate a disturbing trend of the homeless being shuffled to areas with more services than may be required (which could lead to a concentration within a specific area) rather than being addressed in the community they become homeless.

Lastly, the question of where the household or individuals received their reference to the shelter in which they were housed shows a diverse number of sources of referrals both from outreach providers within the community (Waianae Coast Comprehensive Health Center and Waianae Community Outreach) and outside the community (Waikiki Health Center, Kalihi-Palama Health Center, Waipahu Light House, IHS, Next Step, etc.). This again raises the question of whether or not there are adequate resources available in other communities if service providers are directing their clients outside of their geographic region to the Leeward Coast. (These numbers total 238 responses as one transitional shelter provider did not provide a breakdown of how their clients were referred to them.)

Referral Agencies?

History of Homelessness on the Leeward Coast

For more than three decades the community has endured and addressed increasingly difficult social needs including health, housing, homelessness and poverty. As far back as the 1980's there have been many attempts to clear the beaches of the coast where homeless individuals and families were migrating. Service providers increased their efforts to meet this demand through programs such as the Ma'ililand Transitional Housing, Weinberg Villages, Ohana Ola O Kahumana and outreach services to the homeless on the coast.

In 1984 the Catholic Church formed a task force in the parish of Sacred Heart Church Wai'anae to address the concerns of the homeless. This task force was given the responsibility to assist the community in prioritizing what resources would be necessary to meet the need. As a result, the church offered land located in the Ma'ili community to develop the first homeless shelter on the coast. In addition to providing temporary shelter the church and community identified the social services needed to assist the clients with securing housing, getting them off the beaches, parks and streets. To this day, Catholic Charities Hawaii, Ma'ililand Transitional Housing continues to provide shelter and social services to many who face homelessness in the community.

In 1990 the Consuelo Alger Foundation joined the partnership to address the homeless and offered a temporary five year limit on use of land located in Wai'anae. Weinberg Village was built using local volunteer labor to keep cost of construction down. As agreed upon in 1995 the shelter closed, the buildings were donated to other non-profit organizations who were serving the homeless and the land was returned to develop a "Self-Help" housing program of which families provided the "sweat equity", secured low interest mortgages and now are homeowners.

In 1991 Alternative Structures International developed a housing program that addressed the needs of single parent families who wanted to further their education and secure a career to stabilize their family, breaking the cycle of homelessness. In 1992 the shelter expanded their target population to include two parent households. This became the second shelter in the community committed to providing shelter and social services to families experiencing homelessness. To this day, ASI continues to be committed in offering "best-practice" services.

In 2005 a one-day (Homeless) summit brought together 165 attendees representing various groups, organizations, businesses, non-residents and residents of the coast. Their recommendations included:

- Establish an emergency shelter to provide 250 units by 2008
- Create a network of emergency placement sites (private homes, churches, etc) that can provide 50 placements for individuals by 2006
- Create a learning center (Tutu's House) in 2006
- Create a one-stop shop to assist with the needs assessments of people experiencing trauma or uncertain changes in their living condition
- Create an organization that will advocate for the community
- Increase inventory of specialized substance abuse and residential beds and sober homes

- Organize vocational and educational training
- Explore options for housing adolescents "aging-out" (foster care and other such services) to prevent them from homelessness
- Identify available (vacant and/or usable) lands for development of a community business plan for housing

Shortly after the Governor's 2006 town meeting, an emergency proclamation was issued to address the health conditions of those that were living on the beaches and parks of the coast. The proclamation created the H.E.A.R.T. team (Homeless Efforts Achieving Results Together) appointed by the governor that allowed the State of Hawai'i to start the search for property/sites that could be developed into shelters, allowed developers' exemptions from current building permits to "fast-track" development of homeless shelter projects, and to provide emergency funding to assure the minimum cost of these developments could be secured.

Added to Maililand and Ohana Ola O Kahumana, the shelters developed in the West O`ahu area during this emergency proclamation included:

- Onelau'ena and Pai`olu Kaiaulu (the Wai`anae Civic Center) – Emergency and Transition Shelters for both individuals and families.
- Kumuhonua – Transitional housing for single adults and couples without children.
- Ulu Ke Kukui – Transitional housing for families with minor children.
- Onemalu – Transitional housing for individuals and families.
- Kahikolu `Ohana Hale `O Wai`anae – Transitional and Permanent Housing for Individuals and Families.

The two emergency shelters which service the Wai`anae Coast area may house a total of approximately 550-600 individuals. Typically a family or individual will stay within an emergency shelter for six to eight months but through an exception, could be there for as long as a year.

The six transitional shelters provide housing and services to families and individuals for up to two years. This may not be enough time for some families and individuals. Those individuals and families enhancing their skills via specific training or educational programs may not be able to complete those programs, enter the job market and stabilize their situation within two years to qualify for other housing alternatives.

Shortly after all shelters became operational, providers initiated a monthly gathering of shelter workers and other interested parties to identify resources available to case managers to assist their residents. These meetings, soon dubbed 2nd Thursday for obvious reasons, brought together, on average, about forty to fifty participants each month. These meetings were transformed to focus on the needs of the "front line" workers addressing homeless and sheltered individuals and families.

A separate meeting of the directors of shelters and other human service agencies was soon established to identify inter-agency needs and opportunities, and to examine and respond to policies collectively affecting the shelters. These meetings, called Shelter Directors Meetings, provided a venue for administrative and management staff from provider agencies to meet. This group became the Leeward Housing Coalition.

Involvement by the Nanakuli-Ma`ili Neighborhood Board Housing Committee provided a forum for community and shelter residents to express concerns, raise issues and participate in discussions and recommendations to City and State agencies. These meetings became a place for community residents to focus on shelter and community relationships.

While none of these meetings were closed to anyone, they did allow opportunities for participants to focus and address related concerns. Proceedings and recommendations from each group was shared with a Steering Committee of the Leeward Housing Coalition and disseminated amongst members of all groups.

In 2009, the Leeward Housing Coalition hosted a one-day (Housing) summit attended by 125 attendees representing various groups, organizations, businesses, non-residents and residents of the coast. The intended outcomes included:

- Better coordinate services addressing homelessness including access to help, entry and transition into and between shelters, communication and information management developed;
- An updated Community Resource Directory completed and distributed to summit participants;
- An action plan for the community addressing gap areas for long-term and permanent housing would be developed; and
- Initial attempts to identify outcome measurements for shelters would be started.

The summit also pointed out areas in need of improvement and approaches:

- Communication between shelter providers and other support service providers and with the community.
- Building the Leeward Housing Coalition to better coordinate and collaborate between all providers.
- Develop a common vision for housing and human services to include discussion and recommendations relating to the Leeward Coast role in addressing homelessness and the need for a community-base emergency shelter.
- Modify shelter programs to develop options for families, particularly for families that can be helped with home ownership (including self-help, Hawaiian Homes), affordable and long-term rentals.
- Develop a single process for intake, information, referrals and services. Monitor community needs, evaluate effectiveness of services and build further collaborations.

Since these steps required more than a discussion among shelter providers and interested residents, the Leeward Housing Coalition worked with legislators in the 2010 session to secure a joint resolution calling on all appropriate and interested parties to take part in a planning process to address short and long term issues related to homelessness and housing in the West O`ahu region.

The resolution passed as SCR 206, S.D. 1 and HCR 262, H.D. 1, requesting the establishment of the Wai`anae Coast Homeless Task Force to Develop a Comprehensive Plan to Address the Immediate-, Short-, and Long-Term Needs of the Homeless and Those At-risk of Becoming Homeless. These resolutions also identified the Leeward Housing Coalition as the lead agency to spear head this planning effort.

Summary of the Resolution

The Leeward Housing Coalition as the lead agency was requested to:

1. Identify community, agency, and funding resources serving the homeless and the at-risk population
2. Develop a continuum of care for Wai'anae Coast individuals and families who are homeless or at-risk of becoming homeless
3. Develop a case management system based on client outcomes that connects outreach, emergency shelters, transitional housing, and support programs
4. Provide recommendations for single point of access system, and
5. Identify existing shelters and recommend changes in the physical and appropriations infrastructure

The Values and Planning Process used to address the request were developed as the initial part of the response to this report. The value statement provided clear direction as to the community's role and responsibility in addressing the housing needs of the coast.

- The Wai'anae Coast needs to do its fair share in addressing problems of homelessness. Likewise, other communities need to fulfill their responsibilities to this issue for their residents
- We agreed to focus on the needs of Wai'anae, to identify and recommend solutions based on this focus. To adequately and effectively address the needs of our community, we need to apply a "non-categorical" approach to addressing the issues affecting individuals and families on living on the coast
- Homelessness and housing are both cause and effect to a more holistic picture of basic human needs. Preventing homelessness and providing long-term solutions for individuals and families go beyond shelters. Basic human needs (including housing) must be seen as a part of a continuum of care that provides support as people need it.
- Long-term solutions and approaches must include a more active partnership with the private sector. Requiring developers to provide affordable units are only one approach. To increase the inventory of homes in the community, innovative methods are needed to help individuals and families secure permanent housing.
- Individual and family responsibility is a factor that needs to be placed front and center. The people involved have to take a more active role in addressing the issues that prevent full family functioning and permanent placement in housing.

The planning included the development of committees to build knowledge and recommendations that will become the "community protocol" in addressing housing, social and human needs. In 2010 two summits were held, one to address the first four items below and a second in July to discuss infrastructure issues.

The Leeward Housing Coalition did not address the issue of a single point of access and will take up this issue in subsequent meetings after this report is completed and submitted.

Assets Mapping and Communication

Findings

The Wai'anae Coast community and the network of service providers are tightly knitted. Many of the individuals serving in agencies and programs or participating in the delivery of services have worked together for some time and are aware of each other professionally and personally. This has helped to facilitate communication and informal sharing for decades. Most of the coordination takes place between organizations based on funding, timing and relationships. While this informal system works well, it does not necessarily work for providers who are new to the community, are not highly engaged or who provide services on an occasional basis. For years the availability of directories or other collections of information on services were sporadic. Typically they were focused on the interest of the organizations involved and were not usually updated or were discontinued when funding ended.

In the 1990's the Wai'anae Coast Coalition initiated a resource directory to identify a broader range of providers, community groups and civic organizations. The intent was to provide a listing of services available to those working with residents and to provide information to residents who wanted, or needed, to reach out on their own for assistance. Focus was on resources readily accessible (entries focused on services conducting intake and/or providing services on the coast) and did not include resources available outside of the coast.

To improve awareness of resources in the community, a number of options are available including:

- www.96792.info is website that allows agencies and programs to list themselves online and to update information as necessary. The site allows users to utilize key words to locate services.
- A hard copy of the directory is available in limited copies. Because much of the information is time sensitive, few copies are distributed but the directory is made available for those without internet access.
- A monthly e-newsletter is disseminated to all interested parties. The newsletter highlights events, activities and other information useful to the community.
- The community's newspaper, Westside Stories, is published monthly and mailed to all addresses on the coast. This provides access to all 10,000 residences and provides information to all residents.
- 2nd Thursday Resource meetings are used for front line providers and others interested in building partnerships and network of services.
- 2nd Thursday Leeward Housing Coalition meetings are focused on homelessness, housing and related health and human services. This meeting is used to share information, work on interagency coordination, and discuss trends or proposals that will have an impact on the wellness of the community.
- Regular Nanakuli-Ma`ili Neighborhood Board Housing Committee meetings focus on community concerns relating to the homeless shelters and on identifying housing developments on the coast.

Recommendations

- Create a “centralized” information gathering/dissemination entity and process that can include a single point of access.
- Maintain current resource links that include formal agreements between providers to collecting data and information. This may be a requirement for providers in West O`ahu to participate in the Leeward Housing Coalition. Encourage providers to be listed by their services offered to the community and be able to seek support from the community for future developments and sustainability of services
- Provide information and updates to the Neighborhood Boards on services available and readily accessible to the community residents. Allow opportunities for residents to provide input and participate in the evaluation of services provided in the community.
- Provide necessary annual funding for the on-going support of the Leeward Housing Coalition to address issues of housing and homelessness and to continue collaborations to address these issues.
- Require agencies seeking public funding to provide services on the Wai`anae Coast to be actively involved in the community.
- Establish a process of communication with the resource directory to include criteria for funding or grant award assuring applicants’ meet the community protocol eligibility. Making a direct contact with known – established providers’ in the community offering similar services.
- Provide the community with information on further developments or service expansion prior to the initiating of permits or project implementation.

Continuum of Care

Findings

For more than a decade groups that provide services to the homeless have been meeting regularly island and state wide. They are now known as the Partners In Care, a continuum of care model for Honolulu County and Bridging the Gap, a continuum of care model for all other counties in the State of Hawai'i. These meetings have developed into a more formal way of communication and planning when addressing the issues of homelessness. The State developed a 10-Year Plan to Ending Homelessness. This plan provided crucial information that recommended programmatic and systematic changes. It also examines the gaps in the communities of which services are necessary. However, the education and acceptance of the responsibility by most communities have been ignored. On-going efforts to meeting regularly as a "Homeless Inter-Agency Council" challenges government administrators and department directors in determining their full participation, commitment and roles in addressing the homeless issues at all levels of entry or exit.

In 2009 the Leeward Housing Coalition reviewed the 10-Year Plan and developed a system that would allow appropriate attention be given to the homeless and housing needs of the coast, implementing inter-agency agreements for the service providers and create change recommendations to assure future developments of shelters and other critical services be fairly distributed to other communities. Based on this document a "Pathway to Housing" model was developed to determine at what point an individual or family may enter or exit a system of services that will eventually secure stabled housing. This process is reviewed to assure that there is "NO Wrong Door" in accessing services, identifying that any point of access is the "Single Point of Access" for that individual and family. In addition it allowed an evaluation of the effectiveness and adequacy of services being provided as well as determining any gaps that need to be addressed.

The Leeward coast is now becoming the next door neighbor to the "2nd city of Honolulu". This connection is both an asset and a liability. Asset in terms of employment opportunities are more reaching with the newest development of the Disney Resorts, the improvement of businesses created in the Kapolei area, and the future housing developments in the Kalaeloa community. The liability is in terms of cultural perceptions to secure these employment opportunities and housing options.

There is a common commitment that as a community "we" have more work ahead of us as much as we have overcome many challenges. We also are very committed to focusing on the needs of our own community and want to have other communities accept their responsibilities. One shelter program identified that the ethnic group highest served is 70% Micronesian. This is an alarming statement if we are to practice "priority for our residents". This also indicates that the population now being served in the shelters is coming from "outside" the community. We now are challenged to actually assess what communities they from and how do we support them returning there.

The Leeward Coast has increased the number of emergency and transitional units that now can be re-evaluated in terms of the types of housing needs we have and how to best serve the need with current assets. We see the current inventory changing in the next several years. As we move towards this re-evaluation, keep in mind that the need for a continued level of funding is required and encouraged to be more focused on other communities to building their capacity in addressing their community needs.

Recommendations

It is recommended that future contracts for homeless outreach services should be location specific (assigned to regions) with the providers selected aware of and linked to services in the community. There is extreme value in helping homeless individuals and families maintain their existing support systems or to be able to build and repair those support systems available to them in the families, friendships and contacts with service providers in the community in which they live and with whom relationships already exist. These services cannot be limited to shelter providers but need to include others that can assist people with the issues that hinder readiness to entering shelters. It will require that outreach staff be involved with a broader range of services and providers.

For this purpose, we also recommend that placement into emergency and transitional shelters should take into account the existing support systems and strengths of the individuals and families served. It is recommended that future contracts for homeless outreach services should be linked to emergency and transitional shelters within the regions they are serving. Systems should be in place for those individuals and families that would benefit in relocating into another area of the island.

No new, additional emergency or transitional shelters should be developed within the community. The participants at the summit recognized the need for shelters within the community but concluded that there are sufficient shelters within the community to accommodate those un-sheltered who are currently interested in participating in programs leading to housing alternatives.

There should be a reduction in the number of “beds” required for un-sheltered individuals in the West O`ahu region and accommodations developed in other areas on O`ahu where the need has increased. A growing need for more services and shelters in areas beyond the Leeward Coast is evident by the increased numbers of shelter residents who are not from West O`ahu. Resources currently directed to West O`ahu shelters needs to be shared with other communities.

Consolidate the two emergency shelters in West O`ahu into one emergency shelter located in the Kalaeloa area to serve the region.

There should be no “safe haven” locations identified and developed within the community. There is little support for allowing “safe haven” locations to be developed within the community due to the perceived lack of a pathway to other housing alternatives, i.e. public housing or affordable rentals or ownership.

At least one emergency shelter should provide kennels for families and individuals with pets. Many un-sheltered do not desire to move into provided shelters due to the lack of accommodations for their pets. For some, this has become a barrier to moving into shelters. Pets have become a “protector” for some while for others pets have become part of their families.

These kennels would be on property or near-by to allow the families and individuals to visit and care for their pets as they are getting the services required to move into the next phase of their development.

At this time, while the families and individuals are making that transition, there is opportunity to work with them to find other homes for the pets until they can find accommodations for themselves and eventually acquire pets once they are in their own housing accommodations and not within the support structure.

Secure state and federal dollars to support "Housing First" model programs beyond the development stage. The legislature needs to be committed as a state in assuring funds to develop and manage these types of housing are secured for the long-haul.

Transitional shelters should provide a two- or three-tiered system of service to those they accommodate and reasonable time frames for expecting families or individuals to be able to move from transitional housing. As we discussed regarding those who enter the pathway from emergency shelter to eventual stable housing accommodations, it was recognized that not everyone entering this system will be able to move along the same pathway in the same timeframes.

Some families and individuals will not be able to survive in anything except public housing or a shelter plus care accommodation due to lack of ability to earn enough to enter any other housing accommodations. This may be due to age or disability. The time frame they would need in a shelter may be dependent on the availability of units becoming available to accommodate their needs. Other families and individuals may be very capable to be educated in learning new skills leading to better career opportunities but not within the current two year time frame that most families are restricted to in transitional shelters.

For some residents, it may be that shelters provide services to families or individuals who will best be accommodated in public housing or shelter plus care housing due to age or having a disability which makes it difficult for them to find jobs which will allow them to move into any other type of accommodation. For these residents the time they will be in a transitional shelter will be dependent on units becoming available to accommodate their needs.

For those who may be able to learn a skill or be educated for a career, additional time may be required than the two year limit that is currently in place. This time frame would allow sufficient educational or training time required to gain new skills, the time to find employment and the time to stabilize their situation to where they may then access other housing, i.e. Section 8, affordable rentals, etc.

The community needs to establish a Community Housing Development (CHDO) Organization to identify and address its own long term housing needs. This would enable the community to take a more proactive role in providing permanent housing to residents (whether in shelters or not). There is one certified CHDO on the coast. Community organizations should collaborate with this existing CHDO and develop housing strategy for low and moderate income West O`ahu residents.

Case Management

Findings

All providers practice some form of a case management system that is specifically designed for their individual agency or organization. The challenges facing the coordination of services and care is the process in which a "common" intake and assessment is critical. Without agreeing to a formal understanding and use of a standard structure "common process", providers continue to experience disconnection, separation between services and confusion in the transfer of information from one stage of services to the next.

While there have been attempts to identify a common system, technologies have advanced enough to make this goal more achievable than ever. The use of online systems, relational data bases and other internet based options allow us to design such systems. Increased use of electronic medical records is one example of the possibilities.

What has prevented construction of such systems are not unique to the Wai`anae Coast. These include several challenges including the lack of a common definition of terms, service outcomes that lack common agreed upon measures of achievement, lack of consistent monitoring and evaluation by various funders who all have differing expectations of performance and a long standing unwillingness to give up organizational turf.

As altruistic as intentions are towards the welfare of unsheltered and sheltered residents, the system is essentially driven by economics. All agencies receiving funds to provide case management services will design systems that meet the needs and expectations of the funding source. It is this lack of clarity that the community is provided an opportunity to help shape what should be expected and how services should be delivered.

To better manage the need for services, accessibility to services and the transfer of information to assure quality and effectiveness, a basic "common" intake and assessment process needs to be formally used. Each agency or organization has a basic system that gathers information crucial to moving from one level of need to the next, entering and exiting the pathway to housing.

Specifically to homeless services, each provider using Homeless Outreach and Stipend funds are required to collect data, input and manage information to the HMIS as a condition for funding requirements implemented on the Continuum of Care partners. Unfortunately at this time, the system does not allow for the sharing of information between providers to determine if the individual or family is currently or has in the past utilized homeless services, what agency was the last to provide services and what was the exiting process.

Recommendations

- Establish a "Best-Practice" and definition of case management considering national trends such as the HEARTH Act.
- Establish a "code of conduct" among the providers in the community who provide services to the residents of the community.

- Create a “standard case management structure”, offering on-going training on the components of the structure with information that includes:
 - Homeless Verification – Summary of current housing status.
 - Assessment – Summary of the individual or family condition.
 - Determination of services – Prioritizing immediate, short and long-term plans.
 - Placement services – Services and/or referrals needed to implement the plan.
 - Monitoring – Follow up and continuous updating of the plan.
 - Exit and/or transfer – Agreement that needs have been met or a transfer in level of services is warranted.
- Create a “level of outcomes” expected at each level of service (outreach, emergency shelter and transitional shelter services that include:
 - Outreach Services: Shelter readiness
 - a. Securing essential documentation and verifications.
 - b. Developing a service plan with clearly identified goals.
 - c. Determining the willing of the individual or family to seek services that include placement in a shelter.
 - Emergency Shelters: Readiness for Placement in a Transitional Shelter
 - a. Completing any gaps in documentation and verifications.
 - b. Updating service plans regularly (no less than every three months).
 - c. Securing income and benefits to meet program fees of placement into a transition shelter.
 - d. Monitoring and maintaining basic eligibility criteria for other housing options.
 - Transitional Shelters: Readiness for Permanent Housing
 - a. Updating service plans into three possible tracks for housing: (1) preparation for public housing; (2) Preparation for shelter plus and subsidized housing programs; and (3) Preparation for private sector housing (unsubsidized housing).
 - Starting savings programs to address initial deposits and first month rents for public or private sector housing.
 - Maintaining the participants’ eligibility for subsidized housing.
 - Achieving and maintaining employment and increase household minimum income of $45,000 per year (for those seeking housing in the private sector).
 - Improving credit scores and managing debts to qualify for “affordable” or “homeownership” housing.

- b. Developing, implementing and monitoring a specialized program contract between individuals and families outlining the housing track they choose.
- o Increase the level of resources available to individuals and families by utilizing all members of the family in planning and contributing to the changes needed in for placement in permanent housing.
- o Greater flexibility is needed for the variations in need and opportunities in the individuals and families served. Individuals and families placed in public housing currently have different expectations and demands than those who see housing in the private sector and who will rent or own their residence. Options need to be available to these situations.
- o Provide necessary annual funding specifically for the Leeward Housing Coalition – Case Management Services for on-going training and development of components to the structure.
- o Identify and incorporate a ratio for staff training and development in future requests-for-proposals so that all applicant agencies are have a training set aside and are required to train and develop their staffs. Remove this training line item from the evaluation of bids.
- o Provide case management support in public housing to guide residents to non-subsidized independent housing and to determine those who could and should stay in public housing for the long-term, i.e. the elderly or disabled.

Infrastructure and Capital Improvement

Findings

With the advent of the Governor's proclamations to address the health conditions of those that were living on the beaches, in beach parks or other locations along the coast, there were two new emergency shelters built or made available (Pai`olu Kaiaulu in Wai`anae and Onelau`ena in Kalaeloa) and four new transitional shelters built or made available (Kahikolu Ohana o Wai`anae in Wai`anae/Makaha, Ulu Ke Kukui in Ma`ili, Onemalu and Kumuhonua in Kalaeloa). This along with the other two transitional shelters already in existence, Maililand and Ohana Ola o Kahumana, greatly expanded the number of beds that were made available to shelter our residents.

While these shelters went a long way to address the critical need for those who were either living on beaches, in beach parks or other locations along the coast, many of our residents continue to not be receptive to moving into a managed shelter, move to a shelter far removed from their support structure (shelter in Kalaeloa with support structure in Wai`anae) or to move into a shelter and not be allowed to keep their pets (service animals are allowed in shelters).

Truly affordable housing units which could have helped address these concerns continued to be out of the economic reach of our residents, especially as the economy itself caused escalating prices in the housing market and then a decline in the availability of jobs or jobs which paid wages where people could continue to stay in market housing.

Today, along with the continuing struggle to convince families and individuals to enter a shelter system and comply with managed living or without their pets, we are faced with a new situation where a number of families and individuals who have been helped through the expansion of available shelters are now facing a new challenge as they approach the time limits of how long they may stay within these shelters....how to move on to the next step when the housing market appears to be lacking in truly affordable housing for low- and moderate-income families.

While it is commonly believed that there are many affordable housing opportunities on the Wai`anae Coast, care must be exercised in defining what an affordable housing opportunity may be for the families and individuals transitioning out of a shelter. In many instances, it is argued that affordable housing is anything that may be defined as being accessible to anyone making up to 140 percent of the Area Median Income. While that may be a good number to work from for those at the high end of that range, many of the individuals who are moving from transitional housing to either public housing or market housing are not on the high end of that range of wage earners and will fall through the gap and may end up "re-cycling" back through the program system again.

While public housing is definitely a more affordable range for many of the clients who come out of transitional housing, there are not enough accessible public housing available for the current waiting list much less the increased demand that is being placed on the system with the residents "timing out" of services provided within the additional shelters made available on the Wai`anae Coast. In addition to the lack of sufficient units, another concern is the availability of units over time as current public housing residents may not have the means or inclination to move to other market housing accommodations and thereby making available more units for those transitioning through the support services system.

In an effort to determine the direction that should be taken for the future needs to meet the demands of the current infrastructure and systems, a summit was held on July 9, 2010 to discuss the concerns related to infrastructure on the Leeward Coast.

The Wai`anae Coast has struggled over the years with not only accommodating individuals who were born and raised on the coast who have fallen on difficult times but also accommodating many other constituents on the island who have moved to the coast due to the compassion shown by the community to accommodate anyone who has fallen on difficult times.

Currently, one of the emergency shelters has been reported to have over 70% of their residents from outside of the Wai`anae Coast (September Nanakuli-Ma`ili Neighborhood Board No. 36 Housing Committee meeting). This accommodation is challenging the continuing compassion of the community in supporting the un-sheltered and allowing any expansion of either social services or shelter services.

While it is recognized that all families and individuals who are being challenged at finding housing should be provided fair and equal access to services, the governor's proclamation allowing for the development of emergency and transitional shelters on the Wai`anae Coast was to primarily accommodate the needs of the un-sheltered on the Wai`anae Coast. If the composition of the clients requiring services has so significantly changed since the inception of the emergency proclamations, are these shelters still needed?

With the positive movement made to encourage individuals and families to move into shelters, the remaining individuals and families that are un-sheltered tend to be those who have many more challenges than just the desire to move towards a more stable housing environment. Many who are remaining un-sheltered have problems including mental health issues, substance abuse issues or a combination of these.

The summit allowed for discussion to consider the current inventory of the various shelters within the area, the public housing infrastructure, those projects which were built as providing affordable housing units and projects which are proposed in the near future which have been stated to be for affordable housing. It then asked the question of what should be done to improve upon the inventory already in existence, both logistically and operationally, and what should be done in the future.

Some concerns raised during this summit included the following:

- Should there be more shelters developed within the Leeward Coast?
- Should there be a "residency" priority requirement for access to social services and shelter services within the community?
- Should the health, human services and housing providers be connected directly to the community and be "community-based?"

- Crucial core services, i.e. community-based mental health support, should be restored.
- DHHL should take a new and expanded role within the community to support their beneficiaries.
- Should there be a shelter to address the youth who may be identified as emancipated from their parents? (There are minors who are ready to move forward with a more stable life-style which may be inconsistent with their parents or guardians pathways.)
- Should consideration be given shelters providing a multi-track approach to working with clients and future placement based on ability?
- Should there be time limits placed on public housing residency?
- There needs to be a better definition of what "affordable" housing means. Should there be a spectrum of "affordable" housing to accommodate from very-low to moderate income levels?
- Should shelters accept "pets" (these are not service animals)?

Recommendations

No new, additional shelters should be developed within the community. The participants at the summit recognized the need for shelters within the community but concluded that there are sufficient shelters within the community to accommodate those un-sheltered who are currently interested in participating in programs leading to housing alternatives.

There should be a reduction in the number of "beds" required for un-sheltered individuals in the West O`ahu region and accommodations developed in other areas on O`ahu where the need has increased.

There should be no "safe haven" locations identified and developed within the community. There is little support for allowing "safe haven" locations to be developed within the community due to the perceived lack of a pathway to other housing alternatives, i.e. public housing or affordable rentals or ownership.

Crucial core services to the community, which was reduced/eliminated, need to be reinstated and expanded to provide the services needed to prepare families and individuals with mental health or substance abuse issues to accept the pathway for responsible life-styles.

Many of the residents on the Wai`anae Coast that are faced with housing challenges are Native Hawaiians. DHHL should take a more positive role in working with the organizations which are attempting to manage the homeless/houseless native Hawaiians. The Department of Hawaiian Home Lands should provide elderly accommodations for kupuna while allowing their "rights" to be transferred to their descendants. This should be done without the Kupuna "losing" their right to be housing whatever happens to the existing homestead. DHHL should also look at providing more alternatives to single-family housing, i.e. SROs, apartments, condos, and others.

A "new" type of shelter needs to be explored for youth that may challenge to become emancipated or who age out of foster care but are not ready to be totally independent. In our discussions with a number of youth who attended the summit, it became clear that many of the youth want to have a stable environment in which they may live, go to school and engage in other activities that youth in more stable family environments enjoy. Some of these youth recognize that their desires may not be consistent with their family's actions and would like to have an alternative for themselves rather than becoming tied to the actions of the rest of the family. Another category of youth who appears to "fall through the cracks" is those that who have just aged out of being a minor and are trying to get on their feet outside of a family situation.

Qualifications to enter and remain in public housing should be continually reviewed and residents should be working towards leaving public housing rather than public housing being the final "home". All families entering public housing should not only qualify for public housing when they enter but also should continue to receive some form of case management to help them continue on the path to independence and not rely upon subsidized housing for extended periods of time. The only potential exceptions to these qualifications might be for those who are either elderly and cannot obtain employment which allows them to move to other housing or for those that have disabilities also precluding them from obtaining employment which allows them to move to other housing. This does not mean that "time limits" should be put in place for all who enter public housing but a fair and enforceable review process, with appropriate case management, should be established. This has the potential to "free-up" residences for those who are awaiting further housing potentials beyond the current transitional housing in the continuum of care cycle.

A specific percentage of housing must be identified and made available within specific ranges of "affordability" (i.e. very low income, low income, and moderate income) or that housing with truly affordable rental prices are made available and maintained. One of the major concerns that is continually asked and whose answer continues to elude many is the concept of what "affordable" housing means. While many developers are building "affordable projects" on the Wai`anae Coast many do not accommodate the neediest. HUD dictates a definition of the various levels of affordable housing, how many families leaving a transitional shelter are able to locate housing accommodations in Hawai`i and especially on O`ahu that they can afford? More needs to be done to identify and stratify levels of affordable housing so those leaving transitional shelters have an opportunity to locate and enter housing that they can truly afford. This would also extend to those families that are just starting out and do not have employment at the median or slightly above median level that is constantly spoken about. For the Leeward Coast, the current Census 2010 results should be studied and evaluated to establish appropriate affordable housing parameters for very low income, low income and moderate income families rather than use the area median income which includes all of O`ahu.

Single Room Occupancy (SRO) should be explored and made available. Boarding houses should be explored as an acceptable SRO housing alternative. Other options need to be considered for housing besides the conventional structures that we view as successful housing. A form of SRO is the past concept of "boarding houses" or bachelor's quarters. These were a perfectly acceptable form of housing while individuals and families got on their feet.

Mobile home parks should be explored and allowed given proper code restrictions. In addition to SROs and boarding houses, there should be consideration given to other alternatives. While there would definitely have to be building code restrictions to consider our specific challenges, hurricanes, strong winds, etc., this type of project could potentially work with the proper management requirements to guarantee upkeep, no visual blight or other perceived detractors from these types of accommodations.

These recommendations are a step towards addressing many of the continuing concerns regarding the pathway to housing stability that is being provided to help those who are unsheltered. While not all inclusive they go a long way to helping address the continuing challenges as we continue to see such as the economic challenges that are on-going and have the potential to become much worse before it gets better. Consider the number of housing foreclosures that are being experienced at this time. How many of those families and individuals are slated to become houseless and join the masses of unsheltered? We need to start putting in place a better, more comprehensive system to help our families and friends as they move along a path to housing stability.
